UK Intervention in sub-group 1.3 on 7

Thank you co-facilitators for your hard work in the technical streamlining of this text.

The United Kingdom is satisfied with the technical streamlining that has taken place so far. The United Kingdom believes that extended producer responsibility schemes are a crucial tool for driving waste up the waste hierarchy, incentivising more circular product design, stimulating secondary markets and supporting a just transition. We support the introduction of national extended producer responsibility schemes and would like to work on Option 1, we can also support the inclusion of option 2.2 and 2.3, under the implementation paragraphs in option 1.
